a Word about Alistair our Sunshine Star

This summer marks the 5th anniversary of remarkable Alistair's neurosurgery at UCLA Medical Center under the magical care of Dr. Aria Fallah.

Making an almost impossible decision, his parents elected to pursue the complex removal of half of his brain (a hemispherectomy) to stay the ravages of early epilepsy and persistent seizures. Mom Sarah (a keen tennis enthusiast regularly seen around BOH) and dad Dan accompanied him to LA while his brother Atticus and sister Wilhelmina, extended family, and a veritable tribe of family friends donned their Alistair-Superman t-shirts in support during the 9+ hour surgery and lengthy recovery.

Purple is the color of Epilepsy Awareness - we wear it with pride to honor those afflicted, and in the hope there will someday be more accessible and less invasive options for a cure.

Your participation in this tournament directly benefits local organizations who work tirelessly to aide those living with epilepsy. They, and Alistair, thank you for your role in raising awareness. That support has brought so much happiness to Alistair - allowing him to enjoy his new-found love of tennis, and of course, Coach Bill!
